Beattyville staple murdered

Martha Hollar's body was found almost at the door to her Main Street mobile home. Lee County Coroner Ray Shuler said that the body was near where the fatal fire was ignited. Investigators could not find her remains for some time, Shuler said, because her body was under debris that had fallen while the fire was being extinguished. She was lying on her side near a couch. She was recognizable, Shuler said.

Earlier in the evening of Friday, April 11, Hollar visited with her friend Erlene Johnson in the Campbell Mobile Home Park.

She often visited there, many times eating dinner with Johnson and her mother.

That particular evening Martha and Earlene took Johnson's dog for a walk near the railroad.

There they saw a car with two men in it. Martha was suspicious because of a burglary that had occurred at her house she owned in another part of town. The burglary had happened while she was in a hospital being treated for an intestinal tumor.

Because of her suspicions, Hollar wrote down the vehicle's license plate number, and said she was going to contact the Kentucky State Police.

The two then went back to Johnson's home where they ate. Hollar only ate half of a sweet potato.

As she was leaving to go home, she told Johnson that she would wait until the next day to contact the police. She was going home to sew a little dress. The time was 7:30 to 7:40 p. m.

She would be dead in less than two hours.

Three local firefighters, Kyle Cook, Ben Andrews and Gary Angel were the first to notice the fire around 9 p. m. Coroner Shuler was coming down the street, and was the fourth.

A call was made to dispatch and Beattyville/Lee County Fire Chief Hargis Ross arrived on the scene with a pumper.

There was the concern that the fire would spread quickly to the building next to the mobile home. That building, also owned by Hollar, is filled with so many antiques, bric-a-brac and furniture that if it caught fire a large part of downtown Beattyville could go up in flames.

The firefighters were quick to extinguish the blaze, and then the search began for Hollar. It was not known if she was in the home at the time of the fire.

Shuler said the body was found at 11:05 p. m., and he pronounced her death at 11:10.

Kentucky State Police Detective Jesse Armstrong and KSP Arson Investigator Pat Alford began working the scene.

Arrested that night at the scene was 43-year-old Paul Tolson for public intoxication. He had been an associate of Hollar for several years. According to the arrest citation, Beattyville Police Officer Zach Fraley said that Tolson, "Had a strong odor of an alcoholic beverage on or about his person. Above subject was a danger to himself and others."

Tolson was released from jail the next day on a surety bond signed by local business person Jonah Lucas.

The next Monday, the state police announced that 79-year-old Hollar had been murdered.

Public doesn't show for public meeting

No members of the general public showed up for last Wednesday's (April 9) public meeting to discuss the Lee County School Board's proposal to impose a nickel tax to increase bonding potential.

An announcement of the meeting was published twice in another newspaper, according to Board Treasurer Sharron Adams.

The lack of participation was in sharp contrast to a similar hearing held last year when a packed room of citizens mostly showed their displeasure with a plan to close Beattyville Elementary and renovate and enlarge Southside Elementary.

The board told citizens at that first meeting that the state Department of Education would not allow an indebtedness (bonding) for a building as old as Beattyville Elementary.

However, the board wanted to use what is known as a "recallable nickel" to increase its bonding potential, allowing it to add more to Southside and perform other projects on the high/middle school building and the vocational school structure.

The tax is "recallable" because citizens can petition for a vote on the matter, and can vote it down.

The district is proceeding with the first phase of the renovation and additions to Southside because it has the bonding potential for that.

If a vote is held on the "recallable nickel", and it is voted down, the second, and much larger phase, could not be completed.

However, if the tax is allowed, the district would ask the state to "equalize" that money, thus greatly increasing the district's bonding potential. That would allow for the second phase at Southside, plus the other projects.

The Lee County School District has the lowest property tax rate at .29 cents per $100 of assessed value in the state.

City facing General Fund deficit

The City of Beattyville is facing a deficit of $37,755 in its General Fund for next fiscal year, according to Mayor John Smith.

Smith shared that news Monday night with members of the city council. It was during a discussion of a rough, draft of the upcoming budget.

Smith said he expects a revenue shortfall of $14,000 and the remainder of the deficit would come from increased expenses.

He also told the council that he would like to have a detective position added to the police force, but the budget might not allow it.

Both the city and the Lee County Sheriff's Office have expressed interest in sharing Beattyville Officer Matt Easter as a detective. He worked in that capacity while with Operation UNITE.

Smith said it would cost the city about $30,000 to match the funds the sheriff has.

Not only would that be an expense added to a tight budget, but Smith said that the city's health insurance provider has indicated that it could expect a 35 to 40 percent in insurance premiums. That is because health insurance rates, due to provisions in the Affordable Care Act, are based on the health of the local population. Lee County, as well as the rest of Eastern Kentucky, does poorly in health rankings.

Former Owsley clerk owes almost $250,000

Former Owsley County Clerk Sid Gabbard owes almost $250,000 to the county and other agencies, and the state auditor wants to try to get the money.

In a press release Tuesday, Kentucky Auditor Adam Edelen said that Gabbard has a cumulative deficit of $307,768 from his time in office. That is $246,650 more than the $61,118 he paid in restitution after pleading guilty last year to tax evasion and abuse of public trust.

"I am relieved Mr. Gabbard is no longer in a position to pilfer from taxpayers," Edelen said, "but it is disheartening to know that his outstanding deficit dwarfs his restitution payment."

Edelen added, "The 2012 and 2013 audits will be referred to law enforcement and it is my hope that more taxpayer money can be reclaimed."

The release said the audits would be referred to the Owsley County Attorney, IRS, Kentucky Attorney General, Kentucky Department of Revenue and County Employees Retirement System.

The audits from January 1, 2012 through June 14, 2013 found that Gabbard, "...did not maintain adequate accounting records of fee account revenues and expenditures."

In noting the full deficit, the release said, "Due to issues noted in the current and previous year audits resulting from undeposited and/or unaccounted for receipts, disallowed expenditures and expenditures in excess of revenues, the County Clerk has a cumulative deficit of $307,768, at the conclusion of his tenure as Owsley County Clerk."

Gabbard entered his guilty plea in April 2013. He later resigned from his office as a part of that plea agreement.

Roof leak costs county $19,665

Lee County Judge/Executive Steve Mays told members of the fiscal court last Thursday that he had to declare a state of emergency on Wednesday, April 2, because of a leak in the courthouse roof.

Mays said he contracted with Virgil Dunaway (Dunaway Roofing) to make the necessary repairs. The cost, according to the county's claims, was $19,665.

The announcement came during the court's regular monthly meeting.

Also during the meeting, the court set the pay rates for several county officers as required by state law. The rates are effective January 1, 2015.

The county coroner will be paid $5,952; deputy coroner $2,400; deputy judge $18,820; jailer $35,100; magistrates $9,919; finance officer $12,241; county attorney $13,639; administrative assistant $12.44 per hour; and, county attorney secretary $244.88 bi-weekly.

Lee County Conservation Director Sandy Gay told the court that each year the conservation district must report to the magistrates about the proposed budget. She described it as "bare bones," but also said it was a plan of the work to come.

In Fiscal Year 2011-12 the district received approximately $56,000 in income from taxes, Gay said. During the same year,

No more cuts to food stamps

The Kentucky Enquirer

For every sensational story of food-stamp fraud or abuse, there are thousands more of people who depend on them to feed themselves and their families. That's especially true now, with one in seven Americans – a record 47 million people – receiving help from the federal Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP). That number is double what it was a decade ago.

Food benefits have become a popular target, with Congress cutting benefits late last year across the board and in more than a dozen states again this year. But fundamental changes in the economy mean that more Americans need the benefits than ever before, even though the unemployment rate is slowly dropping.

The recession we're emerging from, and the corresponding loss of well-paying jobs, has filled the program with people who never expected to be there. Americans should understand the value food assistance brings and resist the call for further cuts in the program. The real story is how food stamps help needy families and individuals navigate tough times.

"It's among the most effective (programs) out there," says James Ziliak, director of the University of Kentucky's Center for Poverty Research, who has studied federal food assistance for two decades. "It's there to help families in all walks of life, but it's also there to help families who run into a bad patch of luck. It's a very buoyant program."

Locally, the numbers of food stamp users range from more than 4 percent in Warren County to one in seven Boone County residents to nearly a quarter of those in Adams County. The rates of local participation have increased as quickly as the national rates, with more than a quarter million people in the region receiving help to buy food every month.

"We've seen our number of recipients double since 2007, and now one in six in this county is receiving food assistance from our agency," said Moira Weir, director of Hamilton County Job and Family Services. "The economy has taken a toll. We are seeing many people we haven't seen before, as they lost good jobs in the recession and were unable to find work. Or, just as likely, they found work at lower pay and they need the food assistance to help fill the gap."

"We are providing food for up to 140,000 people every day, providing $18 million in assistance to them to be spent at local groceries and markets. That is significant."

Recent cuts and reforms have altered the program in small but important ways. All recipients saw a 5 percent cut in benefits in November that averaged about $11 for single households and $36 for families of four.

Opinion: Food stamps help in times of need

In addition, starting at the beginning of this year, Ohio began requiring working-age adults without young children to work, look for a job or volunteer 20 hours per week as a condition of continuing to receive food assistance. The requirement was part of the 1996 welfare reform but had been waived in 2009 because of the recession. Ohio is also beginning to spread out the day of benefits renewal across the first 20 days of every month, because bunching redemption into just a few days at the start of the month was difficult for retailers to accommodate.

For decades, food assistance has mirrored the unemployment rate, falling in good times and rising when the economy tanks. While economists expect the numbers of recipients to fall as the economy improves, there are fundamental changes to the face of food stamps that should concern Americans. The reality is food stamps help families and individuals.

For instance, recipients are now better-educated and more likely to be working year-round than in the past. People with some college have seen the fastest increase in enrollment, while the rates of high-school dropouts have fallen. And though the percentages of the truly poor have dropped, those above the poverty level but still poor enough to qualify – with incomes up to $15,171 for one person and $31,005 for four people – have joined at increasing levels.

"The SNAP program isn't just for the completely down and out anymore," Ziliak said. "These people, even with some college or more, are getting jobs that allow them to continue in the SNAP program. They're employed, which is good, but at levels where they still qualify for benefits like food assistance."

There are demographic changes revealed in the SNAP program as well. Older adults are less likely to receive benefits, so the aging of the American population is helping to hold down participation over time. But other trends like the increasing number of single mothers, who are more likely to be poor, work to increase food-stamp enrollment. The number of people on disability has also risen quickly in recent years, and because people on disability qualify automatically for food assistance, they've sent SNAP enrollment upward.

While children still receive food assistance in large numbers – nearly half of all American children receive SNAP assistance during their childhood – their rates have been falling, too, while enrollment of adults between 18 and 59 has been rising.

These changes underscore the need for safety-net programs like SNAP, even as policymakers try to improve the economic outlook. On Thursday the U.S. House of Representatives passed a non-binding budget document that would cut food assistance by $125 billion over five years in an effort to balance the federal budget. Earlier this year, Congress also approved additional food-stamp cuts in the 16 states that tie the assistance to heating subsidies, although officials in many of those states have found loopholes to ensure continued food aid. Congress should resist efforts to cut the program further, especially given the shaky nature of the economic recovery.

While cases of food-stamp fraud attract a lot of attention, Ziliak says the program has lowered its error and fraud rates, especially since the actual food stamps have been replaced by Electronic Benefit Transfer cards, a sort of debit card that's loaded with federal assistance monthly. Fraud and errors are also low because more than 80 percent of food assistance is redeemed at major grocers – including about 25 percent, or nearly $20 billion, at Wal-Mart – and those grocers play a role in making sure the program runs efficiently.

In the meantime, participation in the program has leveled off, and the Congressional Budget Office expects it to start falling in 2015 and return near pre-recession levels by 2022. But that decline could be boosted by policies designed to make sure the poorest workers are paid more. The number of SNAP recipients fell precipitously in the late 1990s, when wage growth for low-income workers rose as the unemployment rate fell.

People receiving food assistance now need not just jobs, but higher-paying jobs, to leave the program and become self-sufficient.

BAOG Celebrates Passover Seder

Submitted by Cecille Booth

On April 12, Beattyville Assembly of God, Pastor Keith Holley, celebrated Passover Seder with Messianic Community Leader Frank Houtz and several from local churches and out of state. The purpose of celebrating the Seder was to learn about the customs that Jesus adhered to, especially during the Holy Week.

When the Hebrews came out of bondage from Egypt, they were commanded by God, "On that day tell your son, 'I do this because of what the Lord did for me when I came out of Egypt,'" (Ex. 13:8). They were to tell their children each year of this release from bondage. For example, one of the items on the Seder plate is parsley. There is a small bowl with salt water on the table. They were to dip the parsley into the salt water and eat it, remembering the bitter tears and suffering that the Hebrews endured. This would also foreshadow the suffering that Jesus bore in the Garden of Gethsemane, before Pilate, and Golgotha. It represents our suffering today.

Moving forward several hundred years from the Exodus to the Passover, Jesus, no doubt ate the Seder as part of His Passover meal. This meal would come to represent "the story of redemption, of human dignity, of hope and of freedom, all of the things that we enjoy because of Calvary," (Messianic Passover Haggadah).

As we, here in Beattyville, took the cup of sparkling red grape juice, representing the wine, we learned that the four cups offered at Passover were: The Cup of Sanctification, I (God) will bring you out from under your burden; The Cup of Judgment, I will deliver you from your bondage; The Cup of Redemption, I will redeem you with an outstretched arm; and The Cup of Praise, the I will take you for my people. On the night of Passover, Jesus stopped short of the fourth cup saying, "I will not drink henceforth of this fruit of the vine, until that day when I drink it new with you in my Father's kingdom," (Matt 26:29). Some scholars believe that He is saying that He will not drink the cup until the Marriage Supper of the Lamb when He has come to "take His people" and we will celebrate with Him!

Before Jesus came, God demanded that a sheep had to be sacrificed to "roll away" the sins or guilt of the people for one year. That animal had to be thoroughly examined. It could not have any blemish or illness. In Jerusalem, the lambs would be brought down one particular road to where they would be examined. The people would throw palm branches in the path saying, "Hosanna!" which meant "Save us!" Jesus walked down the same path with the people spreading palm branches and shouting "Hosanna" on His way to intense questioning and examination. He, too, was a "spotless lamb."

Our Seder meal consisted of Charoset (chopped apples, nuts, and honey), horseradish, parsley, an egg, and Matzo bread. Each had dual meanings—one for the Hebrews being released from bondage and the other with fulfillment in Christ. Our Passover menu: Matzah ball soup; mixed salad with Kosher dressings; roasted chicken and lamb with fresh herbs; rice pilaf; cauliflower, broccoli, and carrot medley; and apple crisp.

As we enter this most holy of seasons, let us remember the suffering of Christ, but much more so the victory that comes from knowing Him!

Obituaries

Martha Bell Hollar

Martha Bell Hollar, 79 of Main Street in Beattyville, died at her home April 11. She was a local business owner.

Martha was born October 1, 1934 in Newtonsville, OH to the late Wilbur Weaver and Lottie Glancie Weaver.

She was preceded in death by her husband, Vincent Lynn Hollar; her parents; three brothers – John, Ore, and James; and one sister – Luella Weaver.

Martha is survived by her sisters: Anna Mae Wolfe of Hillsboro, OH, Ruth Barber of Bradenton, FL, Alice Pringle of Newtonsville, OH, and Dorris Summers of Goshen, OH along with many nieces and nephews.

She was a Methodist.

Martha will be interred in the Plainview Cemetery in Newtonsville, OH.

A friend of the family has said that a memorial service might be held in Beattyville, but no official word has been given.

Newnam Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

EASTER

Empty tomb – Easter is about the empty tomb. You can go to the tombs of great religious leaders, and their bodies can be found there. Not so with our Lord. His tomb is empty. No grave can hold his body down.

Ascension – His tomb is empty because he came forth from the grave and ascended to heaven where he sits on the right had of the Father with power and glory. He sits there strictly on our behalf.

Saved – We have heard this term over and over again, because it is the heart of the Easter message. We are saved from what? Our sin. That is where our sins were paid for – on the cross. I love that song, "Jesus paid it all, all to him I owe."

Triumphant entry – Jesus entered into Jerusalem on Palm Sunday on a donkey. Why? Because he was not yet reigning in his people. Now we find hi riding a white (purity) horse in the Book of Revelation because he is now reigning in the hearts of his people.

Eternal – Jesus was both man and God. He was 100 percent man (suffered as we suffer), and 100 percent God. This is the incarnation. He is eternal, co-equal with God the Father. Phillips Brooks said, "Jesus Christ, the condescension of divinity, and the exaltation of humanity."

Resurrection – Jesus' resurrection made it possible for another resurrection called the second resurrection. This is the resurrection out of sin. He can now raise us to newness of life.

A different view

By Betty Crabtree

I hope that this is printed during the week before Easter, and oh, by the way, Easter is mentioned only once in the KJV, Acts 12:4, and should be translated Passover, it's translated so in 26 other places in the Bible.

Anyway, some churches celebrate the Lord's Supper or Communion, once a year at the time of Passover. Which brings me to the following scripture in I Corinthians 11:23-32. I found it interesting that in the KJV and NKJV Verse 24 reads thus, "And when He had given thanks, He broke it and said, 'Take, eat; this is my body which is broken for you; do this in remembrance of me.'"

Did you know that in the original Greek 'take eat' and 'broken' are not in that verse? In the original it says, "He broke it and said, 'This is my body which is [given] on your behalf. (Wuest)" Or re-phrasing the NKJV it would say, "When He had given thanks He broke it (the bread) and said this is my body for you; do this in remembrance of me."

And perhaps many misunderstand V. 28, which says, "let a man examine himself..." Examine? Do most people think of their past sins and ask forgiveness AGAIN? Or do some people carelessly take Communion never thinking of the price paid for their salvation, the crucifixion and all that led up to Calvary's Hill?

To examine in Strong's means to try, test. Wuest's translation says, "putting himself to the test for the purpose of approving himself and finding that he meets the prescribed specifications. If we properly evaluated and formed a right estimate of ourselves, in that case we would not be judged."

O.K. what would be a right estimate of ourselves?

I John 3:3 tells us the Father loves us and calls us his children, NOW V. 6, "whoever abides in Him does not sin..." V. 7, "Whosoever practices righteousness is righteous." And, V. 16, "...He laid down His life for us..."

We're to love one another.

In another place we're told we're the righteousness of God in Christ Jesus. Could it be any plainer?

So when we take Communion, as often as we do, we should be aware of the gift given to us that is in Christ Jesus and give thanks. Agree?

Educational Talent Search representative visits LCMS

By Ellen Jennings and DeAnna Deaton

Tuesday, April 8th the Educational Talent Search representative Will Bowling met with students and parents at the middle school during Operation Preparation. The Educational Talent Search (ETS) Program is a federal Trio Program funded by the U.S. Department of Education. There are hundreds of ETS Programs across the nation, several of which are located in Kentucky. The Talent Search Program hosted at Eastern Kentucky University since 1985, is funded to serve 765 students in the following Kentucky counties: Estill, Garrard, Jackson, Lee, Lincoln, and northern Madison.

ETS identifies individuals who meet the federal income guidelines for the program, and those who will qualify as potential first generation college students. Students must have the desire and abilities to succeed in some type of education after high school (such as community college, vocational/technical school, four-year College or university, and proprietary school). The program provides in-school workshops and other activities for personal development, academic enrichment, career exploration, college preparation, and financial literacy. In addition, our scholars are provided direct assistance with ACT testing, college admission, financial aid, and the scholarship application process.

In addition, ETS provides assistance to adults who are interested in continuing their education, who live in counties not served by an Educational Opportunity Council (EOC) Program.

Little League competes for championship

By DeAnna Deaton, Ellen Jennings, and Haley Tipton

On March 29th, 2014, the Little League Championship games were held at the Lee County High School gym. The six seeds were the Spurs, Thunder, Pistons, Heat, Magic, and Warriors.

The games began at 10 a.m. The Magic and Heat were the first to face off. The Heat won. Then, the Warriors and Pistons played. The winner from this round was the Pistons. At noon, the Spurs and Heat played. The Spurs won. At 1:00 p.m. Thunder and Pistons faced off. The Thunder team won.

At 2:45, the championship game took place between the Spurs and Thunder. The Spurs won the championship. Congratulations to the teams.

Eye to Eye

with David Blandford, M.D.

PROMISING NEW GENE THERAPY FOR BLINDNESS

Experimental gene therapy used to treat “choroideremia” (a rare and under-diagnosed genetic disease characterized by progressive vision loss, mainly among males) proved so successful that it is being hailed as a breakthrough treatment for blindness. The early trial was intended only to test the safety of the new therapy, which involves introducing a gene into the eye that is defective in those suffering from choroideremia, which causes about 4% of all cases of blindness. Much to the surprise of researchers, the treatment stopped the steady degradation of patients’ vision and seemed to have reversed some of the damage. In one case, the effects lasted two years. The treatment shows promise for other blinding disease, most notably macular degeneration.

Today’s informative column about new treatments is brought to you as a public service. At KENTUCKY EYE INSTITUTE, we are educated, trained, and licensed to provide total ocular health. Total eye care includes performing comprehensive medical eye examinations, prescribing corrective lenses, diagnosing injuries and disorders of the eye, and using the appropriate medical and surgical procedures necessary for treatment. ## “City” from Front

Also, he said that Workers Compensation insurance is increasing by $18,000.

Smith said he is exploring joining a possible insurance cooperative with the Kentucky League of Cities. That would increase the health insurance by only 10 to 15 percent. However, the city is locked into its present plan until the end of this calendar year.

The mayor said the future for water, sewer and garbage is brighter than for the General Fund. He said he anticipates a deficit in water, but surpluses in both sewer and garbage.

The council must approve the first reading of the proposed budget during next month's meeting.

Also during the meeting, the council gave the second reading to an ordinance that would raise the mayor's salary from $6,000 a year to $10,000 a year, and keep council member salaries at $3,000 annually.

Smith asked that the mayor's salary only be increased to $8,000, and revisit the rest of the increase next year.

The mayor's salary comes from the Water, Sewer and Garbage Department. The council members are paid from different accounts. Four of them are paid from the General Fund because of their committee assignments. The other two are paid from Water, Sewer and Garbage.

At the beginning of the meeting, Smith thanked the firefighters whose quick response to a downtown fire Friday night limited the damage to just the one mobile home involved.

He also expressed his thoughts and prayers to the family of Martha Hollar who was murdered in the home.

“Her presence will be greatly missed,” he said.

A year-to-date financial summary through the end of March shows the General Fund in the black by $97,620. Garbage is $20,148 to the plus. Sewer is in the red by $574, and water shows a negative balance of $17,315.

Smith said that he and some city employees have looked at a new software that would be cheaper and more efficient than the one now in use. He also said five new computers are going to be needed.

The mayor said that a new sewer pump had to be installed at the Lee Adjustment Center. He said that items such as sheets and towels had destroyed the old one.

Going forward, he said that the prison is going to have to pay $1,000 each time the city has to work on its pumps. The city had to repair pumps at the prison 18 times during the period of January through March.

“Roof” from Front

the district invested $190,000 in Lee County. About 85 percent of that went into the hands of the people of the county.

“You're getting your bang for your buck,” Gay said.

She also said that the district might come before the court to increase its property tax rate from .39 cents to .41 cents.

Mays told the court that someone had used salt on the Heidelberg Park basketball court during the winter, and had damaged it. He said AWI had estimated the repairs to be in excess of $10,000. The county's insurer, the Kentucky Association of Counties, has not got back on whether to proceed on the repairs.

In other business, April was declared Fair Housing Month.

The second reading was given to a budget amendment that includes the purchase of two Mack trucks, and income for roadwork.

Charlotte Condy, jail transport, received a payroll increase from $8 an hour to $8.50 an hour.

Russell Ogans was hired as a full time solid waste supervisor at $12 an hour.

Billy Joe Commer, Jr., was hired as a full time solid waste laborer (with six months probation) at $8.50 an hour.

Ambulance driver Steve Combs received a payroll increase from $8 an hour to $8.50 an hour.

The county will conduct a spring clean up Friday, April 25, and Saturday, April 26. Friday's hours are 8 a. m. to 6 p. m., and Saturday's are 8 a. m. to 3 p. m.. No tires or wood will be accepted.
